token 1

token. A token is either a single character tagged with a category code, or a control sequence. TeX reads characters from a file using its eyes (see "anatomy of TeX", p. '\anatomy') and groups the characters into tokens using its mouth. When a token reaches TeX's stomach, TeX interprets it as a command unless it's part of an argument of a preceding command.