1

\global

This command makes the following definition or assignment global (see "global", p.'global') so that it becomes effective independent of group boundaries. You can apply a \global prefix to any kind of definition or assignment, including a macro definition or a register assignment.

Example: